Having and keeping good relationships can be tough. But it's even tougher with an animal who's misbehaving. Behavior problems disrupt human-animal relationships every day. Misbehaving pets are given up, abused or euthanized by owners not aware that there may be alternatives. The staff of Pet Behavior Consultations & Partners for Life Dog Training offers personalized behavioral therapy programs to help owners understand and modify their pet's behavior so that a healthy human-animal bond can be formed and preserved.

Our staff consists of animal behavior consultants who are veterinarians or animal psychologists. All have advanced degrees and years of experience working with all kinds of animal behavior problems. Some are considered to be the top veterinary behaviorists in the country. In addition to helping owned animals we have also used our expertise to help animals without homes through working with several humane organizations.

We help with all kinds of behavior problems in dogs and cats: aggression, fear, anxiety, house soiling and destruction. Most consultations are done in our office in Lexington, but may also be arranged in owner's homes. Phone, fax and on-line consultations (PetBehaviorProblems.com) to both owners and veterinarians are also available.

During an appointment, the behavior consultant takes a detailed history of the problem from the owners, observes the animal's behavior and performs some behavioral tests. A diagnosis is made and a treatment program set up with the family. Treatment recommendations may consist of management, behavior modification, surgery and drug therapy. Follow-ups are done either by telephone or at the office for an unlimited period of time. Owners' veterinarians are always sent a copy of the treatment plan.

AMY MARDER, VMD CAAB

Dr. Marder, veterinarian and Certified Applied Animal Behaviorist, through the Animal Behavior Society, is a graduate of the University Of Pennsylvania School Of Veterinary Medicine and completed the first residency in veterinary behavior at the same institution. Dr. Marder has written two books and edited another for pet owners on general pet care. She was also the author of Prevention Magazine's "Your Healthy Pet" column and has been a frequent contributor to veterinary textbooks and journals. Her recent article "Food-related aggression in shelter dogs: A comparison of behavior identified by a behavior evaluation in the shelter and owner reports after adoption" was published in the journal of Applied Animal Behavior Science and was very well received.

Though PetBehaviorConsultations.com we can now help people who are having behavior problems with their companion animals but don't have access to a veterinary behaviorist. A detailed behavior history form is available online which is read by one of our behavior consultants. Very often we ask for a video of the problem behavior and often work with the animal's veterinarian if medical problems are involved or drug therapy is recommended. For people who are not able to use the web, we also provide telephone consultations.
